

AIUB DSpace Publication Details

Title	The role of venture capital in entrepreneur development in Bangladesh
Author(s)	Md. Maksudur Rahman Sarker; Mohammad Zakaria Masud; Ziarat H. Khan
Contact Email(s)	ziarat@aiub.edu
Published Journal	AIUB Journal of Business and Economics [AJBE]
Type of Publication	Journal Article
Volume	8
Issue	1
Publisher	American International University-Bangladesh (AIUB)
Publication Date	January 2009
ISSN	1683-8742
DOI
URL
Other Related Info.	Page 91-105
Keywords
Citation	Sarker, M. M., Masud, M. Z., & Khan, Z. H. (2009, 1). The role of venture capital in entrepreneur development in Bangladesh. AIUB Journal of Business and Economics [AJBE], 8(1), 91-105.

Abstract

Venture capital is the main source of equity invested in rapidly growing companies with high growth potential. Companies like Microsoft, Federal Express, Digital Equipment, Apple Computers, Genetech Inc. are examples of successful outcomes of venture capital investment. We have seen tremendous growth of entrepreneurship development through venture capital investments in developed countries during the last two decades. The success parameters and variables are not consistent in all developed nations. But developing countries like Bangladesh are far behind than that of the success story of venture capital. This paper has pointed out the investment process and global investment scenario of venture capital. Entrepreneurship development through venture investment is another major issue to be discussed in this paper. Moreover, prospects of venture capital investment in Bangladesh have also addressed.

Sustainable Development Goal(s) (SDG)

Goal 9: Industry, Innovation and Infrastructure
